WE LOVE YOU ALL

DEAR FRIENDS,

It is my pleasure to welcome you to The Auction 2022 and back to the wonderful Christie's.

This year, Terrence Higgins Trust enters its 40th anniversary. Throughout this year and next, you'll see exciting campaigns, events and activities to get involved in, but it's also a time of remembrance and reflection. What strikes me the most as I look back is seeing how HIV has changed since the 1980s. It's no longer a death sentence, and people on effective treatment can't pass HIV on to their partners and can expect to live a long, healthy life. But one thing that hasn't changed is the stigma around HIV.

Stigma can affect all people living with HIV, sometimes at different points throughout our lives – it could be the attitude of a friend or family member or a negative experience at the GP. While medical advances and dedicated support services can enable people to live well with HIV, the attitudes of others, often due to misinformation or outdated views, can cause us damage and hurt, and even affect the care and treatment we get from others.

It's why campaigns like Life Really Changed are so important, celebrating the successes of people not just living with HIV but achieving great things, reaching their goals and challenging perceptions of what it 'looks like' to live with HIV. The virus no longer needs to limit people's lives, but unless we challenge it and be a part of the change, stigma will continue to.

Thank you to The Auction Committee, for their unwavering and enthusiastic support – we couldn't do this without you. Thank you to all of you here this evening and showing your support online, we are delighted to be back and hope that everyone has a fantastic evening.

TOGETHER WE'RE TAKING A STAND AGAINST STIGMA

As Terrence Higgins Trust enters its 40th year of activism, care and remembrance, it's more important than ever that we work to tackle HIV stigma. We've made huge strides in HIV treatment – people on effective treatment live normal lifespans and are unable to pass on HIV – but 40 years on, stigma and lack of understanding are still widespread.

Stigma is one of the key reasons why people avoid getting tested, and it can affect the lives of people living with HIV. It's still the case that many people's understanding of HIV is stuck in the '80s, and that can mean attitudes are stuck there too – we need to change that.

HIV has changed is one of our key messages from our recent Life Really Changed campaign which gets the word out that HIV shouldn't stop you doing anything you want to do. It's thanks to your support that we've been able to get this message out to so many people and help to break down HIV stigma.

By working to tackle HIV stigma we work to improve the lives of people living with HIV and to finally bring an end to the epidemic.

Your support helps us train Positive Voices speakers on how to share their story to tackle the stigma and discrimination around HIV. Thanks to you we can also help support people living with HIV to overcome the barriers they might face from stigma through our counselling and support services.

Together we can end stigma so people living with HIV can get on with life.

Despite being diagnosed many years previously, I still find there are ups and downs. Living with HIV can be hard, sometimes the stigma that you experience can get you down. It's usually from people who don't know the facts, but I've even had stigmatising comments from healthcare staff and my GP. Becoming a Positive Voices speaker was a big part of coming to terms with my diagnosis and doing my part to end the ignorance behind the stigma.

Sue

IT ON

Just 16% of people know that people living with HIV cannot pass on the virus if they are on effective treatment¹. Stigma that affects people living with HIV also stops others from getting tested. The more people who test and get onto effective treatment so they can't pass on HIV, the fewer HIV transmissions will happen.

14% of people with HIV experienced discrimination in a healthcare setting with 18% avoiding healthcare when they needed it, 11% denied or refused a treatment or procedure that they needed².

Nearly half of UK adults wrongly think that you can contract HIV from kissing, sharing a glass, spitting, from a public toilet seat, and coughing³. Outdated information can result in prejudice and discrimination against people living with HIV.

Stigma around HIV can have a devastating impact on our lives. But with the right tools and support, it doesn't have to. It was through Terrence Higgins Trust's mental health support that I first discovered the Positive Voices programme. Now it's like therapy for me, I have a voice. As a speaker for the charity, I am helping to challenge stigma by telling, and owning, my story.

Ese and Sue are Positive Voices speakers for the charity, going into schools and workplaces to share their stories to help tackle the stigma around HIV.

Edition AP 1 of 10

Patrick Hughes lives and works in London. He is widely recognised as one of the major painters of contemporary British art. His solo show in 1961 was the first by a British Pop Artist. His work is in thousands of private and public collections including the British Council, the Victoria & Albert Museum, the Tate Gallery, the British Academy and the British Library.

Of Aroundbow, Hughes says: "We usually see rainbows as part of an arc, part of a circle. If you see one from an aeroplane or at Victoria Falls you discover they are actually giant rings until the Earth gets in the way. I have imagined a reflected rainbow making a perfect hoop with an imperfect lifebelt to save you."

Unique

Antony Gormley is widely acclaimed for his sculptures, installations and public artworks that investigate the relationship of the human body to space. His work has developed the potential opened up by sculpture since the 1960s through a critical engagement with both his own body and those of others in a way that confronts fundamental questions of where human beings stand in relation to nature and the cosmos. Gormley continually tries to identify the space of art as a place of becoming in which new behaviours, thoughts and feelings can arise.

Gormley was awarded the Turner Prize in 1994, and received an OBE in 1997 with a knighthood following in 2014. Gormley has been a Royal Academician since 2003.

05 CONRAD SHAWCROSS RA

BICAMERAL STUDY, 2020

Weathered steel

Height 80cm x width 76cm x depth 69cm

Stamped with edition number and artist's seal

Edition 1 of 3 with 2 Artist's Proofs

British artist Conrad Shawcross RA specialises in mechanical sculptures based on philosophical and scientific ideas. He is the youngest living member of the Royal Academy of Arts.

'O, what a world of unseen visions and heard silences, this insubstantial country of the mind! What ineffable essences, these touchless rememberings and unshowable reveries! And the privacy of it all!' – Julian Jaynes

Shawcross says: "The name bicameral comes from 'the origin of consciousness in the breakdown of the bicameral mind', by Julian Jaynes; Jaynes' book theorises that consciousness evolved out of the use of language, particularly metaphor. The sculpture is a progression of bifurcating and trifurcating elements that fan out from a stem loosely forming two hemispheres or sides. The work is in some ways an arcadian symbol for reason, humanity, rationalism, progress, whilst the abstract modular structure oscillates between recognizable natural systems such as neural pathways, a set of lungs, or even a schematized tree itself, but in the end it remains elusive to definition."

The piece was created entirely without welding, using techniques drawn from Japanese wood joinery.

Rob and Nick Carter are a husband and wife artistic duo and have been collaborating for almost 25 years. Their work is housed in collections all over the world and they are the only living artists to have shown a work at the Frick Museum, New York. The Carters have also executed a number of significant public and corporate commissions throughout London, including works for Cardinal Place in Victoria, 200 Aldersgate, 23 Savile Row and Great Ormond Street Hospital. In 2018, 2020 and 2021 they were part of the Summer Exhibition at the Royal Academy of Arts. Collectors of their work include Sir Elton John, Jude Law, and Sir Peter Blake.

The Hindu festival of Holi also known as the Festival of Colours initially inspired Rob and Nick Carter's Paint Pigment Photographs. The physical act of throwing the paint pigment is an essential aspect of the finished work. Explosions of colour captured at 1/8000th of a second retain the energy of the act itself, suspended in space. The images are about colour and an unpredictable interaction with form and light.

Felipe Chavez is an artist born in Colombia and working in London. Through his paintings created with Indian ink on paper, he uses his own body to explore his personal struggles that come with feeling different and trying to find where he belongs. Now by being open and revealing through his art, he can create a sense of power and control over who he is and who he chooses to exhibit.

In his latest artwork I Cried In My Hallway Last Night he delves into those moments where he is so immersed in his practice that he loses sense of where he is and how he feels: art for Felipe is a diary of his healing process and a witness to his mental state.

Liane Lang is a visual artist, living and working in London. She studied at the National College of Art and Design, Goldsmiths College and the Royal Academy Schools. Lang takes a special interest in statuary and monuments and her projects have included the plaster cast collection at the Royal Academy of Arts and the Atelier de Moulage of the Musée du Louvre. She has exhibited widely and her work is held in public and private collections, including MoMA, V&A, The Art Institute of Chicago, Royal Academy of Arts, and the Saatchi Collection.

Lang created this image at Berlin's Zitadelle Spandau Museum which houses the Siegesallee statues. She transforms Wilhelm II's dynastic and militaristic telling of history with the subtle addition of a life-like baby doll, making the scene suddenly more domestic and intimate, a gentle and loving moment. She points toward the role of families, marriages and children as being perhaps a greater part of the history of territorial expansion and political power than war and conflict.

Brian Reynolds studied at Chelsea College of Art during the 1990s. His work is owned by a number of private and public collections including the Royal College of GPs, The House of St Barnabas, the Barings collection and the UK National Art Collection.

Reynolds's paintings are abstractions which have multiple layers of meaning, represented through layers of colour, form and texture.

Study 21 is from a series of paintings that examine the social economic shifts in the North East of England during the 1980s, a period of intense deindustrialisation. The paintings focus on the decline of a small, close knit fishing community where the artist was born. For Reynolds these works are seascapes which capture the dark, dangerous, and foreboding nature of the North Sea; they are physical manifestations of the loss suffered by a small community, while echoing the emptiness and despair of addiction.

I have tried to see how far I can remove the image from its source to create something independent of what it originally represented. Christy Lee Rogers is a visual artist from Kailua, Hawaii. Her obsession with water as a medium for breaking the conventions of contemporary photography has led to her work being compared to Baroque painting masters like Caravaggio. Rogers applies her technique to entangled bodies submerged in water at night, using the refraction of light while building elaborate scenes of coalesced colours and bodies that capture the vigour and warmth of human character as well the beauty and vulnerability of the human condition.

She has exhibited widely and her works are held in private and public collections throughout the world. Rogers' art has been featured on several album covers, including 'Orchesography' for the '80s band Wang Chung. She won the 2019 Open Photographer of the Year and in 2020 she created the cover image for the 2021 Lavazza Calendar 'The New Humanity.'

She Walks In Beauty, Like The Night is an archival photograph taken from Rogers' Odyssey Collection. Like Bryon's short lyrical poem of the same title, both pieces deal with instant attraction and use the contrast between light and dark, day and night, to evoke the beauty of the subject.

London-based Turkish artist Güler Ates studied at the Royal College of Art and is currently Digital Print Tutor at the Royal Academy Schools. Her work can be found in the print collections of the Victoria & Albert Museum, the Royal Academy of Art and the Museu de Arte do Rio (MAR). At the heart of Ates's work with video, photography, printmaking and performance lies an exploration into the experience of cultural displacement shown through merging of Eastern and Western sensibilities.

Longing of Orange Sea (I) was taken at the Palazzo Madama in Turin during Ates' residency at Art Site Fest in 2018. Palazzo Madama is one of the most famous Royal residencies of the Savoy, who bought art and culture to Italy with them, and also the first place to be occupied by the Roman Empire in the first century BC. Ates seeks to discuss the current volunteer or involuntary human movement by looking into this history, emphasising the cross-cultural pollination in this place.

Heralded by Sir Elton John as a leader in contemporary realism, Melbourne-based artist Ross Watson is known for his contemporary, homoerotic twists on classic-styled paintings, as well as contemporary locations adorned with a nude male - often out of place such as in front of a guard on duty. Untitled 01/17 (After Jean Baptiste Regnault, Featuring Alexis) falls between both camps with Kings Cross Steelers rugby player, Alexis Caught, placed within a classical scene.

Watson says: 'I found Alexis on Instagram, and he modelled in his uniform for the gay rugby team, the Kings Cross Steelers, in London in July. Unlike the curated "good" version of life so often presented on social media, I was impressed by his candid posts - including experiencing anxiety, depression and self doubt - and I thought "he's helping reduce stigma and educating so many". This helped me in the composition of painting to depict the theme of education.'

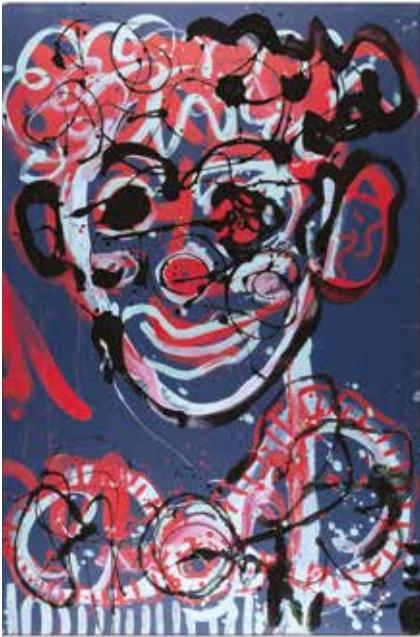

Printed on archival museum quality paper, the quality of the giclee print rivals traditional silver halide and gelatin printing processes and is commonly found in museums, art galleries and photographic galleries.

Metal brackets for hanging*

Paul Chisholm is a contemporary British Artist having received his Masters from Chelsea College of Arts, London. His work often deals with his diagnosis as a HIV positive artist.

The title of this art work is taken from his series inspired by the circus 'The Lost Children of Paradise'. This use was found in some of Shakespeare's plays and a comedy act, 'Jack and Jill', performed around 1567-8 at the Elizabethan court. "A good Jack makes a good Jill" is an old English proverb having the same meaning. However, the rhyme was first known as Jack and Gill, referring to two boys, not a boy and a girl. This work plays on gender identity and queer relationships and points to the brave faces some of us have to face in a heteronormative society – where despite our hard won battles, we're still a minority.

The works come complete with Certificate of Authenticity and metal brackets for hanging.

LOT

*Charcoal on raw canvas in black wood box tray frame
Framed size height 62cm x width 52cm
Signed and dated on verso*

Dd Regalo is a Canadian London-based contemporary artist known for adapting poetry into abstract painting with a style that is both outwardly expressive and distinctly personal.

Applying both text and abstract gestural markings, this seemingly playful piece moves past naive rebellion in an attempt to capture the feeling of a specific moment - the moment you decide to go for it. It plays with the idea of surrender and flips it from a position of weakness to an opportunity for strength. The rhythmic tessellated circles fill the page with increasing vigour and represent letting go, and in doing so becoming fully immersed without inhibition.

50 BLAIR MARTIN CAHILL

THREE GUYS, 2020

Embroidery on reflective material
Framed height 37cm x width 26cm x depth 5cm
Edition 1 of 5
Signed

California based artist Blair Martin Cahill studied at California Institute of Arts and Chelsea College of Arts. Blair's work explores the boundaries of sculpture, tradition and technology, and often juxtaposes modern and dissimilar materials, such as steel and silk. Her work can be found in private and public collections worldwide.

Three Guys depicts the close interaction of three different young men. What unites them is unclear, but they are drawn together, not only by their body language but by the actual physical threads that draw them closer.

Cahill says: 'The piece deifies the usual conventions by portraying young strong men with fine needlework, an art form usually reserved for more delicate uses. The highly reflective sports material that it is embroidered on echoes their fashion sense and love of physical activity.'

51 BRUCE DENNY

INQUISITIVE, 2009

Bronze
Height 45cm x width 60cm x depth 30cm
Edition 1 of 6

Born in 1967 in Suffolk, Bruce Denny spent his youth making things out of anything he could lay his hands on. He is both fascinated by the way things work and their form and structure, by art and science. Now London-based, Denny's figurative sculpture describes his love of the human form and function.

Inquisitive is part of a series of bronze sculptures that combine introspection with communication, asking questions of the self that are both timeless and generous.

Denny says of the piece: 'Those who show an interest in others will always find plenty of opportunity for interaction. The danger is, this can all too frequently become one way, and we can find ourselves to be a bit of a crutch for everybody else's problems. Be a good listener and ask open questions to bring people out of themselves, but remember to give of yourself too.'

Who Wants To Live Forever is part of a series of studies created by the artist in preparation for their latest art exhibition, capturing light photons in different ways to create a three-stage visual experience.

At first glance, the painting is a textured execution in ultramarine, a personal favourite of the artist. If all light sources are removed, the promethium photo-luminescent cobalt blue pigment reveals a close-up of a starry galactic cluster, whilst the ultraviolet reactive paint displays the hidden message when activated by UV light.

The art piece is an invitation to wonder in a profound way about the nature of human existence. The intent behind this concept is to capture the observer's imagination and begin the philosophical journey. Whether we look at this painting and instantly hear a Queen anthem, or if we make the connection between Prometheus and the starry nebula, all interpretations are valid.

ROYAL BOOK, 2020

Ernesto Romano is an Italian artist living and working in London. Romano's works are digital or photographic prints, based on his own X-Rays. His art delicately celebrates the importance of both diversity and equality but above all the inclusiveness for all, which, says Romano "is what art should be - for everyone". He has exhibited nationally and internationally.

Royal Book is the artist's homage to the iconic UK First Class Stamp which features Her Majesty The Queen. This re-interpretation uses his own X-Ray to depict the Queen's profile combined with the well-known 1st font used on the first class stamp. Frameless and contemporary, the glossiness of the perspex face enhances the colours of the image.

One of two pieces donated to the Auction this year, Lording It is a first edition print of the illustrated sculpture, the 'Sacred heart of Jesus Christ' bust, purchased by Wolski at a local antiques market and lovingly re-conditioned. As with many of his illustrated curiosities it is not always the provenance of the piece that adds to the value but the skilled application and thought behind it.
